Call for Papers

The NSPR invites papers and abstracts by scholars from all over Europe to this conference on Critique, Protest, and Reform. Deadline: 31 January 2017.

The Reformation represented one of the major historical shifts in philosophy, religion, and society during the second millennium; e.g. the modern philosophical idea of Critique and the political ideals of Protest and Reform are decisively formed by Luther and the other reformers. In Northern Europe, its influence on thought, mentality, and society is so pervasive that it can hardly be over-estimated.

This conference will emphasise its continuous and current influence on philosophical and religious Critique from the 16th to the 21st century, the question of Certainty, the rhetoric of Protest, and the quest for Freedom in philosophy, politics and society. New angles are explicitly welcomed, including inter-religious and interdisciplinary perspectives. Topics and keywords:

- CRITIQUE: On Certainty / Critique of Reason / Transcendence, Spirit, and Phenomenology / Image and Perception
- PROTEST: Freedom and Liberation / Justice and Justification / Political Domination and Religious Re-formation
- REFORM: Formatting Religion / Paul and the Philosophers / Text, Truth, and Terror / History of the Hidden God

Deadline: Abstracts up to 300 words are due by January 31st to marium@mail.uio.no
